Chapter 1 by stfine

(prologue ;P. ok so basically it's about a young script writer trying to make it in their home town before they try to move away to a big city or something.)

Every script starts out the same. Some one word title that is a poor excuse for a "hook", and the same FADE IN:INT-DAY. Sometimes it would be OUT-NIGHT or something of the sorts. But always a crummy story about a crummy person who wants their dreams to come true. The best stuff I write is at night. After ten cups of coffee some musical inspiration and my anti-anxiety meds. It's brilliant to me. And when I have that idea I run with it. I go and go until i have made it perfect. And that's why I can't make it in the real world. I'm always so caught up in my own self proclaimed brilliance that I can't for the life of me write when I'm commanded to. My family is way too supportive and it gets on my nerves. I guess when you have big dreams, you are harder on yourself than someone who wants to be a pharmacist.
